

Gayle Hallowell MA VetMB DipACVIM CertVA MRCVS

I qualified from the University of Cambridge and then completed an internship in Equine Studies and residency in Equine Medicine and Critical Care, both at the Royal Veterinary College, which led to acquisition of an RCVS certificate in veterinary anaesthesia and an American Diploma in Large Animal Internal Medicine. I then stayed at the RVC as a Temporary Lecturer in Equine Medicine. I am currently completing a PhD funded by the Horserace Betting Levy Board studying the aortic valve in horses. In addition to this I still see clinical cases and am Special Lecturer in Large Animal Medicine at the University of Nottingham. My main clinical and research areas are cardiology, gastroenterology and critical care in large animals.
