

James Kyffin BVSc(Hons) MRCVS

James graduated with honours from the University of Bristol in 2005 having completed an elective in canine gastroenterology, cardiology and critical care. After graduating, James spent 4 years in small animal first opinion practice in the UK before joining Protexin Veterinary as International Technical Manager in November, 2009. He is enrolled for the RCVS certificate in small animal medicine and has a particular interest in gastroenterology, endocrinology and feline geriatrics. James has lectured in the UK and abroad on the role of probiotics in clinical practice and also on the benefits of antioxidants in the management of liver disease. He attends all the major international conferences and over-sees the company's research into the use of probiotics.