

Julian Hoad BSc(hons) BVetMed MRCVS

Julian came into veterinary medicine as a second career, having first read for a microbiology and biochemistry degree, followed by three years of virology research at the Institute for Cancer Research in Fulham.

Having completed his veterinary degree at the RVC in 1996, Julian has worked in predominantly small animal practice and has developed interests in surgery and ultrasonography; lecturing in these subjects to veterinary nurses and veterinary surgeons. Julian is the author of 'Minor Veterinary Surgery: a handbook for Veterinary Nurses.'

In addition to part time lecturing and partnership in a small animal practice in West Sussex, Julian is a keen rock climber and amateur dramatist (having accomplished a successful attempt of Mont Blanc and Macbeth in the same year).
