

Julie Ouston MA VetMB MRCVS PGCE

I qualified as a veterinary surgeon in 1989 from Cambridge University, and then spent three years in general practice before becoming involved in teaching.

I started teaching in 1992 at Farnborough College of Technology, initially only for 1.5 hours per week and working in practice in between. Gradually the teaching grew until I became full time in 1997.

In 2001 I set up MYF Training delivering veterinary nursing courses and providing VNAC services to practices. The business has continued to grow, and I now employ 8 people all of whom believe as strongly as I do in the importance of good training for VNs.
